The Design of the Slant Light Pavilion

The Slant Light Pavilion was designed by architect Frank Gehry and completed in 2008. The pavilion is made of steel, glass, and wood, and its design is inspired by the natural forms of the surrounding landscape. The pavilion's most striking feature is its large, sloping roof, which provides shade from the sun and creates a sense of openness and airiness. The roof is also supported by a series of slender columns, which give the pavilion a light and airy feel.

The Views from the Slant Light Pavilion

The Slant Light Pavilion offers stunning views of the ocean and the surrounding landscape. From the pavilion, you can see the Pacific Ocean to the west, the Santa Monica Mountains to the north and east, and the Los Angeles basin to the south. The views from the pavilion are especially beautiful at sunrise and sunset, when the light casts a warm glow on the landscape. You can also enjoy the views of the starry night sky from the Slant Light Pavilion.

The Poetry of Sarah Westcott

The Slant Light Pavilion is also home to the poetry of Sarah Westcott. Westcott is a poet who has been inspired by the beauty of the Santa Monica Mountains for many years. Her poems are often about nature, spirituality, and the human condition. Westcott's poems are displayed throughout the pavilion, and they add to the sense of peace and tranquility that the space provides.
